PULSE - Principals Understanding Leadership in Special Education: 2021 Save the Date

Note: Due to COVID-19, the PULSE series will be offered virtually via Zoom. Participants are required to log in to Zoom and remain online for the duration of each training day (see schedule on page 2).

This 30-hour PIL approved course aims to build upon a principals' working knowledge and skill set needed to successfully innovate and program for students with disabilities. The growing field of research at the intersection of the position of principal and special education yields evidence-based practices that support outcomes for students with disabilities. PULSE coursework incorporates a variety of essential topics throughout the three instructional days, such as the use of data practices, instructional strategies, and innovations to improve student achievement, legal literacy, and implementation of and sustaining evidence-based practices. Through retrieval and analysis of data related to special education to understanding programming options for inclusive systems and individual student supports, participants will increase their abilities to lead and impact student and systems growth. Other experiences that encourage knowledge and skills around special education include self-assessment, lectures, review of literature, videos, scenarios, discourse, and action research design.

Objectives:

Upon completion, participants will be able to:

- Identify the necessary components to effect change
- Analyze and share his or her vision and mission statements
- Identify key principles of IDEA and Chapter 14 regulations
- Identify the roles and responsibilities of an LEA representative
- Analyze and implement the use of assessment data to guide instructional decision making
- Analyze data to identify patterns of behavior
- Identify alternatives to suspension and expulsion
- Identify organizational culture and core values to strengthen relationships with stakeholders

Day 1 - Leading a Culture of Change

Participants will engage through the use of literature, data, and discourse to learn about leadership, change and vision, laws and regulations, Least Restrictive Environment (LRE), LEA Representation and Climate and Culture.

Day 2 - Being an Instructional Leader

Participants will engage through the use of literature, tasks, data and discourse to support learning of instructional influences that impact achievement including visible learning, Multi-Tiered Systems of Support (MTSS), universal design for learning, standards-aligned and alternate eligible content, specially designed instruction (SDI), supplementary aids and services, assistive technology and secondary transition.

Day 3 - Supporting Effective Behavioral Systems

Participants will engage through the use of literature and discourse while completing several tasks to support learning around school-wide positive behavior systems (SWPBS), the principles of behavior, functional behavior assessment (FBA) and positive behavior intervention plans (PBSP), manifestation determination (MD), alternatives to suspensions and expulsions, and restraint reporting.

Day 4 - Culminating Project

Participants will be afforded the opportunity to present their culminating learning project during Day 4 of the PULSE series. PaTTAN instructors and cohort participants will be allotted time to ask questions and provide feedback on individual presentations.

Please note

As part of the 30 PIL hours each instructional day requires 3 hours of prereading activities. Participants are expected to complete the prereading activities as outlined on the course syllabus prior to each instructional day.
